¹ 1

· 2

5 6

ABSTRACT

Time-limited electrical audio signals are fed to an electromechanical output transducer in addition to the signals from the hearing aid input. Some of the time-limited audio signals are user-defined. The process is implemented in a hearing aid having an electromechanical transducer and a signal processor. An audio signal generator has a user-changeable memory and/or a read/write memory that can be programmed by the user.